Jail expansion could double operating funds

BY TRACI BONNEY

Air conditioning and expanding the Hancock County Jail could double its operating budget.

Sheriff Ronald A. Peterson asked the Hancock County Board of Supervisors at a workshop meeting Tuesday to consider permitting the necessary changes to prevent the removal of federal inmates from the jail.

The jail currently houses 30 Cuban inmates, many of whom are in the country illegally. According to a recent letter from the Department of Justice/Immigration and Naturalization Service, the jail will lose those minimum security prisoners and will no longer be used to house federal inmates, if air conditioning isn't installed.

The jail receives $45 day for each federal prisoner. This amounts to about $500,000 per year, which is the entire operating budget for the jail.

"If we don't do this, and we lose those prisoners, we'll have to look elsewhere for the money," Peterson said.

Peterson estimated the cost of installing air conditioning at between $20,000 and $50,000, and said someone currently is drawing up the specifications to present at the next board meeting.

An expansion using an area underneath the jail would allow the jail to house another 30 to 40 federal inmates, doubling the jail's revenues and budget.

Peterson said there is a possibility that the county could get a federal grant to fund the expansion, if the board of supervisors approves it.

Pan Am ends strike

An agreement reached Thursday by union and company negotiators was ratified

Friday ending the strike by the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers against Pan Am World Services Inc. and Williams Wrecking and Construction Company Inc. at the John C. Stennis Space Center.

The vote was 148 to 35. Andre Joyce, commissioner from the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, mediated the meeting that produced the final agreement and ended the four-day strike.

Pickets were removed by the union late Thursday night. Both company and union officials said they were satisfied with the agreement that modified the final offer Pan Am made before the strike began.

The compromise included a 3.5 percent pay increase each year, with a five cent per hour addition to each employee's pension fund. Short term disability insurance was eliminated from health coverage in order to reduce premiums, according to John Embry, industrial relations representative for Pan Am.

The parties agreed that there will be no reprisals, fines, harassment or intimidation by

Lakeshore woman hurt in hit-and-run incident

BY TRACI BONNEY

Hancock County Sheriff's Department personnel are investigating a hit-and-run that occurred Thursday on Lakeshore Road.

According to Investigator Matt Karl, Kay B. McGovern, 30, of Lakeshore was struck by a car with a white top and red-to-brown body, driven by a white male.

Karl said Deputy Billy Pepperman responded to a call at about 2 p.m. that day from Hancock Medical Center personnel, who said a woman had been brought into the center and left there.

Reading from a report of the incident, Karl said McGovern was jogging, as she did every day, when the car in question passed her twice. The third time she saw it, it was heading toward her.

"The guy just ran slap over her and left," Karl said.

McGovern couldn't sit up or move enough to get the car's license number, he added, because her leg was broken in several places.

However, she was able to flag down a passing motorist, who took her to the medical center.

"We need to talk to the guy that helped her now," Karl said. "He just dropped her off and left, so we weren't able to talk to him."

So far, the Sheriff's Department has no suspects in the case.

Karl said if anyone has information that would help the investigation, he or she should call the department.

S. Koreans interested in ammunition purchase

BY JANET MCQUEEN

Efforts by U. S. Senator

Trent Lott may result in a sale for the ammunition produced at the Mississippi Army Ammunition Plant at John C. Stennis Space Center.

Col. Jeong Lee, an attaché for the South Korean embassy in Washington, said his government is planning to purchase large amounts of ammunition from the plant. According to The Clarion Ledger Thursday, the South Korean government is also interested in the purchase of the 13-acre facility.

The Army is not interested in selling the plant, according to Washington spokesman Maj. Joe Padilla, but would instead like to maintain control of the compound in case of a national emergency.

The $434 million plant manufactures 155mm. artillery rounds, which are sufficiently stockpiled for use by the United States. The facility was targeted for closure after funding was not approved for 1990.

AMMO PLANT—Page 3A

Army not approached for plant sale, lease

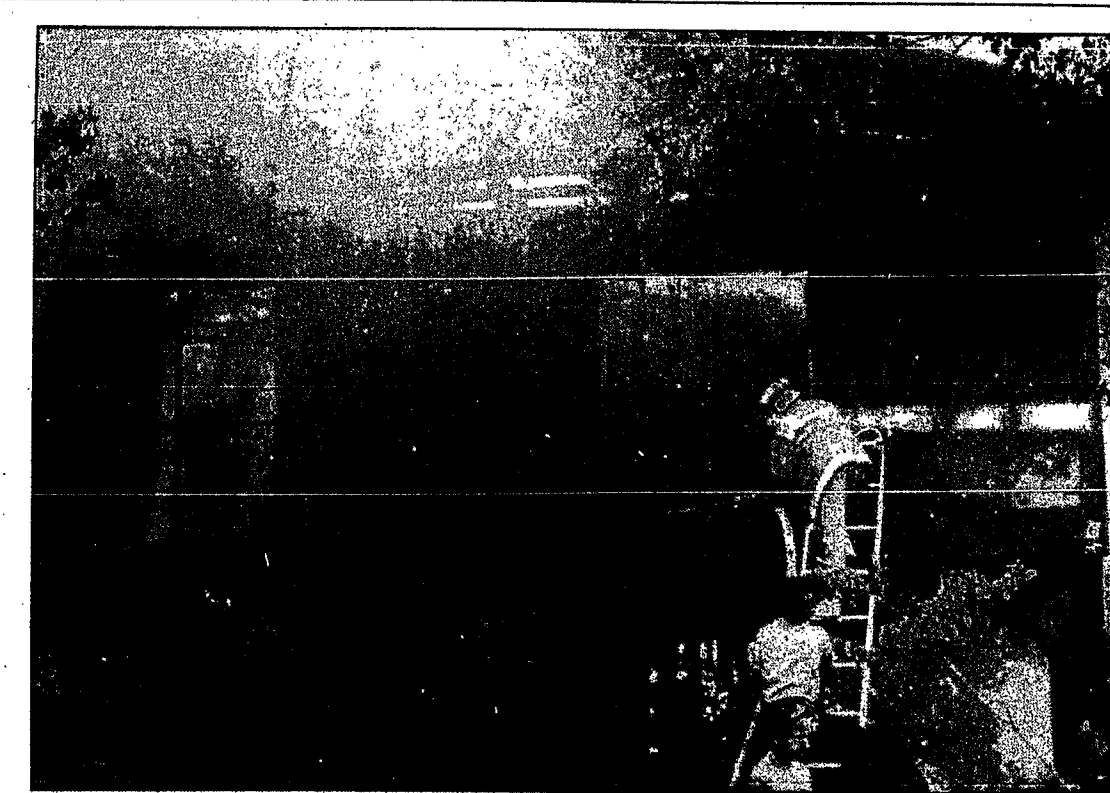

BY JANET MCQUEEN

Spokesman for the U. S. Army Maj. Joe Padilla stated the South Korean government has not approached the Army or contacted the State Department about the purchase or lease of the Mississippi plant.

The remarks by S. Korean logistics attaché Col. Jeong Lee of his country's intention to purchase large amounts of ammunition and possibly the plant itself came as a surprise to the Army and to the plant contractor, Mason Chamberlain Inc.

Mason Chamberlain Inc. is the process plant in 1989 of the plant's 1,700 employees and has shut down production of the manufacturing facility with the exception of training rounds in the assembly area.

S. Korean defense ministry personnel visited the site on April 17. The request of Sen. Trent Lott may have responded with a counteroffer to the Army, indicating interest, but have not offered a contract.

Bay St. Louis man pleads guilty in slaying

Geno Farantino Tillman, 18, of 763 Washington St., was sentenced to life in prison Monday after pleading guilty to killing a man who gave him a ride.

Tillman will be eligible for parole in about 10 years.

Tillman was charged with capital murder in the fatal shooting last year of Charles E. Daniels, 37, of Slidell, La., but the charge was reduced by Assistant District Attorney Dale Harkey as part of a plea bargain agreement, according to Bay St. Louis Police Investigator Tom Burleson.

Tillman told Circuit Judge Jerry O. Terry that he had been hitchhiking in Slidell and that Daniels gave him a ride to Bay St. Louis. When they stopped, Tillman said, he went into a house, got a 12-gauge sawed-off shotgun and shot Daniels.

Tillman said he was under the influence of alcohol at the time and could not explain why he shot Daniels.

Tillman was found in possession of Daniels' car at the time of arrest. Daniels' body was found on Keller Street about 6 a.m. on July 26 by a resident. Daniels had been shot in the right temple at close range.

City will lose tax revenue from tidelands

BY TRACI BONNEY
Although city officials are not yet certain how much the new tidelands map will affect local tax revenues, they do know it will have an effect.
The map, released by Secretary of State Dick Molpus, establishes what property along the Mississippi Gulf Coast is public and what is private. The map indicates both the historical boundary mandated by the U.S. Supreme Court in the 1988 case of Cinque Bambini v. State of Mississippi and the 1973 boundary mandated by the state legislature.

The determination of which will be the official boundary awaits a decision from the Mississippi Supreme Court.
Tax revenues from property formerly considered private, but now ruled to be state-owned, will be paid as lease on the property to the state if those businesses now on the state-owned property wish to continue using it.
What effect will this have on revenues paid to the City of Bay

St. Louis?
"We will lose that tax revenue, but hopefully it won't hurt our budget that much," said Mayor Edward A. "Eddie" Favre.
What will the city do to recover the lost revenues?
"I know what we won't do," Favre said. "We won't raise taxes. I don't know about the school district or the county, but the city won't raise taxes."
Among properties in question is the Bay-Waveland Yacht Club, which pays approximately $7,000 a year in city and county taxes.

No single-family homes were affected by the establishment of the boundary.

Patrol compiles most wanted fugitive list

Fugitives, beware!
The Mississippi Highway Patrol is compiling a flyer of the state's 10 most wanted fugitives. The flyers will be distributed to all state law enforcement agencies and to post offices statewide, and will be posted at Highway Patrol stations and commercial driver's license examining centers.
Major Jay F. Clark, chief of the Highway Patrol's Criminal Investigation Bureau, said, "Fugitive apprehension has never been a consolidated effort in the state. With this special flyer, these fugitives will be getting attention from sources that were once uncoordinated."
Among those fugitives on the list is a man wanted by the Hancock County Sheriff's Department.
Jeffery D. Kerr, whose last known address is in Pearlinton, is wanted for escape and importation of drugs, according to the flyer.

Stennis Space Center Director Roy Estess said:
"We couldn't be happier with the final result. I have got to give a lot of credit to the union for moving the pickets voluntarily to the reserve gate without waiting for a court order."
"The union and the two companies deserve credit for their professional conduct during the dispute. I cannot say enough about the outstanding job done by SSC Security in enforcing the gate policy and keeping tension to a minimum."
"We are glad to have these people back at work where we need them."

Ammo Plant

The Senate recently approved $30 million to mothball the plant; approximately 400 of the plant's 1,700 workers will retain jobs past August.

Lott met with S. Korean officials earlier this year to arrange a visit to the Hancock County plant. Although his office has not received official notification, Lott said "We were certain there would be a buy at some point; the question was how much and when it would come. "Whatever the decision is, I hope it will be reached quickly so the plant can continue operating."

South Korean interest in the plant dates back to October 1989, when, at Lott's request, U. S. Secretary of Defense Richard Cheney spoke to South Korean Minister of Defense Sang Lee about the purchase of the ammunition.
The 155mm shells are S.

Korea's newest generation of ammunition, according to Lott's media aide Susan Irby.
"As we look around the world, one of the greatest dangers of communist threat is in South Korea," she said. "We feel it would be in our interest to be helpful to them in allowing them to maintain a greater share of their own defense."
According to Lott, any purchase of ammunition will be a direct buy from the U. S. Army.

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

A special treat was in store for the St. Stanislaus student body on Thursday when they received an address by Col. Felix (Doc) Blanchard.

Blanchard, a 1942 graduate of St. Stanislaus, was the best football player ever to rise from the ranks of a Hancock County team.

A three-time collegiate All-American at Army, Doc still maintains the record of receiving the Heisman, Sullivan and Maxwell trophies all in the same year.

And better news is the fact that Blanchard has donated all three of his trophies to St. Stanislaus, where they are on display in the student assembly room.

Edward Murtagh of Bay St. Louis played end with and was a teammate of Doc's at Stanislaus, where they both graduated in 1942.

Murtagh visited with the football superstar to recall some of the times they had together more than 48 years ago.

Brother Aquin Gauthier, director of alumni relations at St. Stanislaus, also acquired some football highlights of Army's 1945 season, in which the Cadets from West Point rolled over everyone in sight.

As a matter of fact, when they played Notre Dame, both teams were undefeated. Army ran away with the contest, scoring something like 48 points to Notre Dame's 0.

Talk about a small world! Three weeks ago I was at a newspaper publishers' meeting in Texas. I was having lunch with some of them and one from Texas told me that his father-in-law, James O'Donohoe, had attended St. Stanislaus, played football and also graduated the same year as Doc Blanchard.

Murtagh reports he remembers O'Donohoe, and he even met him while they were serving overseas during World War II.

WASHINGTON REPORT

By Senator Thad Cochran

Cochran believes Pascagoula homeport will survive

Senator Thad Cochran believes the Pascagoula homeport will survive proposed budget cuts.

The large amount of local and federal dollars that have already been spent on construction and related development of Naval Station Pascagoula make termination unlikely, Cochran said in a Washington news conference Friday.

The Pascagoula project is "very well situated" relative to other homeports that are planned because of the advanced stages of construction and the location of the Mississippi facility near Ingalls Shipbuilding.

"It sells itself as a port that ought to be kept in use by the Navy," Cochran said. "Plans are so far along and the construction underway to such an extent that it would be economically unwise to eliminate our port," he said.

"An expensive causeway has been built to the naval station. The federal government has either obligated or spent about $26 million on construction already, and local funds of almost $39 million have been provided for the project."

In addition to construction on the homeport location, Navy contracts for local shipbuilding orders also relate to the project, Sen. Cochran said. Ingalls Shipbuilding has begun construction of the USS Barry, designated for location at the Pascagoula homeport.

Cochran said the moratorium ordered this week by Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney on new construction will permit a very thorough review of all homeport plans and may possibly result in the elimination of some homeports.

"I really don't think they're going to eliminate the one in our state. We're certainly going to fight for it," Cochran said.

IN CONGRESS

By Rep. Gene Taylor

President charts correct course

Unaccustomed to walking more than a few yards, freed American hostage Frank Reed emerged from a U.S. transport plane in Wiesbaden, West Germany, last week a little unsteady on his feet.

Thin and pale, Reed blew kisses to the crowd of American military personnel and diplomats who cheered his arrival. He kissed the ground of the U.S. airfield.

Television reports and newspaper accounts helped all Americans to rejoice in Reed's arrival and celebrate his release from 39 months captivity. Just one week before, former U.S. hostage Robert Polhill was freed by his Lebanese captors. And Americans were caught up in the same sense of elation.

While it is wonderful that hostages are being released and we are glad to have them home, this nation should not forget the six other Americans who remain in captivity. We can't go easy on the countries and groups who illegally abducted them to begin with.

I stand with our president who is dead set against bargaining with terrorists. Bush thanked Iran for its help when Polhill and Reed were released, but he called for the unconditional release of all American hostages.

Iran's English-language Tehran Times reported that the release of the two hostages was "without precondition and solely humanitarian." But in the same sentence, the paper said that without "an appropriate response" by the U.S. there is little chance that additional hostages will be freed.

Bush's response was just right. He didn't offer any deals.

In terms of the overall relationship between the countries, Iran shouldn't expect any favors until all Americans are freed, Bush said. "We are not in a piecemeal basis, bidding for human lives," he said.

This nation's heart goes out to Terry Anderson, Joseph James Cicippio, Thomas Sutherland, Alan Steen, Edwin Tracy and Jesse Turner, who are still being held in Lebanon. And our hearts break for the families of the six men.

While we share their pain, it is not in the nation's best interest to exchange hostages for any form of American concessions. If the president were to bargain for the hostages with terrorists, it would just encourage terrorist countries like Iran to abduct more innocent American hostages.

Should the jail be air conditioned?

Right off the top of one's head, the answer whether or not to air condition the jail would most probably be no.

But one must remember that there is a difference between a jail and prison.

At times persons are placed in a jail who may not be guilty of any crime.

Only in recent weeks, one resident was placed in jail for several days after being charged with a crime which never happened. This is not the first time this has happened at the local Criminal Justice Facility.

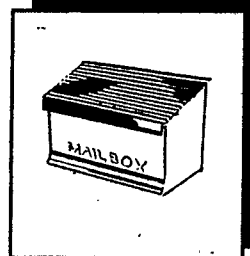

Currently it costs in the neighborhood of one-half million dollars a year to operate the new jail.

The county receives some one-half million dollars a year for housing some 25 to 30 federal inmates which takes care of the salaries of the jailers and food and transportation of the jail population.

The county received a letter this week from the Immigration and Naturalization Service advising that unless air conditioning is installed at the facility, federal prisoners will not be housed at the jail.

True, it costs money to take care of the federal detainees, but it also costs money to take care of the local jail population, which is in the neighborhood of 40 to 65.

As a sound business judgement, our Hancock Board of Supervisors can do nothing but air condition the county jail.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

State Insurance Commission guilty of discrimination

To the Editor:

Ever wonder how government governs?

Most people feel very poorly, too cumbersome and not cost effective as private business.

Take the Mississippi Insurance Commission—main duty is to regulate insurance companies and their rates. The Commission does not even employ an actuary on staff!

Each insurance company submits rates for dozens of coverages, each with a variety of possibilities, discounts and upcharges.

These plans are sent to an "independent actuary" in Atlanta who says "approve" or "change" or whatever... the Commission rubber stamps this.

A good example is liability auto insurance—there is a basic rate for each insurance company—then the fun starts:

Extra charges: Single male under 25; anyone over 65, 70, 75; had an accident within three years; do not also carry collision; others.

Discounts: Small car; insure more than one car; buy homeowners insurance from the same company, others...

This is discrimination as many companies won't write homeowners on the Coast. If you have an old car not worth collision coverage, or merely reach 65 even with a spotless record.

These people must pay higher premiums—upcharges they can never escape, unless they move away from the Coast or buy a new car.

No longer is liability insurance based merely on risk... a variety of schemes to enrich companies are approved by government without the knowledge to regulate.

With computers, doesn't it make more sense our Insurance Commission should have an actuary program and deny insurance companies all these confusing ways of rating premiums?

Through the medium of your paper, I would like to thank everyone who was involved in the recent visit here of dialysis patient Mandy Kirwan from England.

Reflections

On Life

By Father Jerome
LeDoux, SVD

Don't put me on hold

Call-waiting is a marvelous advance in the technology of telephonic communication. It is also a dastardly demon at times which makes a mockery of the very thing called communication.

Teen-agers are far and away the strongest justification and validation for the existence of call-waiting.

There is probably not one older person alive who has not felt like climbing the walls many times over, dialing and redialing a number which repeats nothing but a busy signal.

Threats of death seem to be of little avail as deterrents to conversation-happy teen-agers who thoughtlessly clog the telephone lines of most households.

Various businesses, of course, fare much better with the device of call-waiting which allows them to suspend one customer momentarily while they set the gentle hook for another.

Nor do the customers mind the slight inconvenience of waiting, for they know that it is simply business. The bottom line is that, for many businesses, call-waiting spells more money more quickly.

Even excluding teen-agers, the home phone can be quite busy, depending on the loquacious bent of each household. Herein lies the next big advantage when someone is trying to call in from long distance.

It is particularly irksome to call long distance, receive a persistent busy signal, and have no way of letting the other party know that you have an urgent call to put through.

After these scenarios, call-waiting becomes an annoyance and sometimes an outright insult to a person on the other end of a conversation.

Even during light conversations where both parties are at ease and in no hurry, it is often a nuisance to interrupt the dialogue repeatedly with checks on the beeps. However, these interruptions are still within tolerance because of the possibility of urgent local and long distance calls.

However, it becomes a completely different matter when the telephone conversation is very serious, personal and delicate. This kind of conversation brooks no interference, except it be of the direst necessity.

For one thing, it is crucial to such a conversation that both parties be able to concentrate solely on each other, free of any distraction and threat of disruption.

For another, it is only common courtesy to reserve prime space and time for intimate conversations. In addition to the comforting effect of courtesy, the person who is unloading a burden is buoyed considerably by the perception that she/he is the only item or person on the agenda at this time of concern and anxiety.

This perception is best accomplished by disengaging the feature of call-waiting while the intimate dialogue is in progress.

On the other hand, in this day of call-waiting, it is often the counselee, not the counselor, who is the offender; for, to the utter dismay of the counselor or listener, the counselee will not infrequently interrupt her/his intimate narrative or exchange to grapple with a signal from call-waiting. I am sure that many others find this a distasteful and frustrating as I do.

Please, don't put me on hold. Question me, challenge me, contradict me if you see fit, but don't put me on hold. Call my opinions and conclusions into question. Just don't put me on hold.

Interrupt our exchanges of pleasantries, postpone our moments of levity, and ignore my small talk if you grow tired of it. Take care of business and keep your telephone lines prudently open.

I ask only that, when my conversation become serious and personal in an earnest effort to communicate, you do not put me on hold.

Local MADD chapter reorganizes

The Hancock County Chapter of MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Driving) has been reorganized under the leadership of Darlene Bilbo, and now will include Harrison County.

"The chapter had become inactive in the recent years, but the drunk driving law breakers continue to operate vehicles on our roads endangering the lives of our citizens, visitors and our children," said Mrs. Bilbo, chapter president.

"We need to educate and inform the public and help our law enforcement officials to enforce our laws."

"Since the chapter has expanded to include Harrison County we are looking for a suitable location for our meetings that will be easily accessible to all our members," stated Bilbo.

According to Bilbo, MADD goals are to work with victims of drunk driving crashes by providing emotional support and practical information and to offer support and reassurance throughout the judicial process, accompanying victims to court.

"We refer victims to appropriate resource agencies. Our second goal is education, and we work hard to educate all age groups about alcohol as well as safety on the roadways."

"We do presentations to service clubs, professional associations, corporations, schools, churches and other community groups. This service is available upon request and free of charge," said Bilbo.

Alcohol related crashes kill 22 young people each day, more than 8,000 each year. MADD encourages young people to get involved in programs such as Red Ribbon Campaign, Candlelight Vigil, Prom Time and various other holiday programs.

"This boosts the self-esteem of our youth. Our third goal is legislative and judicial activity. MADD monitors the actions of prosecuting attorneys and judges to determine that they strictly enforce drunk driving laws."

"We feel with the combined efforts of Hancock and Harrison County citizens, along with the support of law enforcement officials, we can start to make our community a safe place for ourselves and our children," Bilbo concluded.

For more information and membership applications contact: MADD Hancock/Harrison County, P.O. Box 294, Bay St. Louis, MS 39520, 467-5977.

Self-taught computer expert breaks into magazine writing

BY TRACI BONNEY
Al Williams, a 26-year-old former Bay St. Louis resident and self-taught computer

Al Williams

Wood named trust officer

Hancock Bank's management committee has announced the recent hiring of Catherine Wood as trust officer.

A former trust officer and assistant vice president with Gulf National Bank (now Peoples Bank) in Gulfport, Wood directed Gulf National's trust activities for six years and has worked with trust accounts for more than 13 years. There, she was responsible for developing, retaining and administering personal and corporate trust business with the objective of profit and quality services for customers.

expert, is breaking into the world of computer journalism. Williams, the son of Bea and Cecil Williams of Bay St. Louis, is a lead systems engineer for Quad S, a consulting firm.

He has published several articles in national and international magazines. His first work to appear in a newsstand magazine was recently published in Dr. Dobbs' Journal, a widely read magazine for professional computer programmers.

"That series of articles covers programming the 80386, a new, more powerful computer chip," Williams said.

"I've gotten a lot of positive response from the first article." The first article was published in the March issue. Two others are scheduled to be published in July and October.

Williams, his wife Pat and their six-month-old son Patrick live in League City, Texas.

When he isn't working with computers, Williams enjoys fishing, cooking and reading. He currently is working on his first book about — what else? — computers.

A 1983 graduate of the Southern Trust School in Birmingham, Alabama, Wood has completed numerous AIB courses at Mississippi Gulf Coast Junior College. She is a professional affiliate of the South Mississippi Estate Planning Council and past professional affiliate of the Mississippi Life Underwriter's Association and the Mississippi State Bankers' Association Trust Committee.

A resident of Pass Christian, Wood has one son and attends St. Paul Church.

Sierra Club

The May 24 program of the Sierra Club will feature Roger Jones, director of the Mississippi Nature Conservancy. The Nature Conservancy is the nation's and the world's leader in the acquisition and preservation of natural habitat.

In Mississippi alone, the Conservancy has overseen the acquisition of 73,659 acres (the 44,000-acre Pascagoula River Wildlife Management area, for example) and the voluntary registry of 9,676 acres.

The Conservancy finally established a permanent Mississippi office in April 1989, directed by Roger Jones, who comes with extensive experience with the South Carolina Conservancy. Jones has some exciting news to share about present and future acquisitions in Mississippi.

The public is invited to the free presentation held at the Marine Education Center in Biloxi at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, May 24. Refreshments will be served. For more information, call 435-2623.

Bay High Student Council hosts a 'Picnic in the Park'

Each year the Bay High School Student Council sponsors an activity to show its appreciation to the student body for the support and cooperation given throughout the year. This year, the council said "Thanks" with a "Picnic in the Park" on the school grounds for the students.

The lunch time was extended half an hour, and students were served a picnic lunch prepared by the cafeteria.

It was a chance for students to "chill out" and visit with friends, to stretch out on a blanket or a lawn chair and rest before going back to class.

The music, provided by student DJ Mark McKay, was loud, but no one seemed to mind. Several students danced to the hip-hop sounds as others watched.

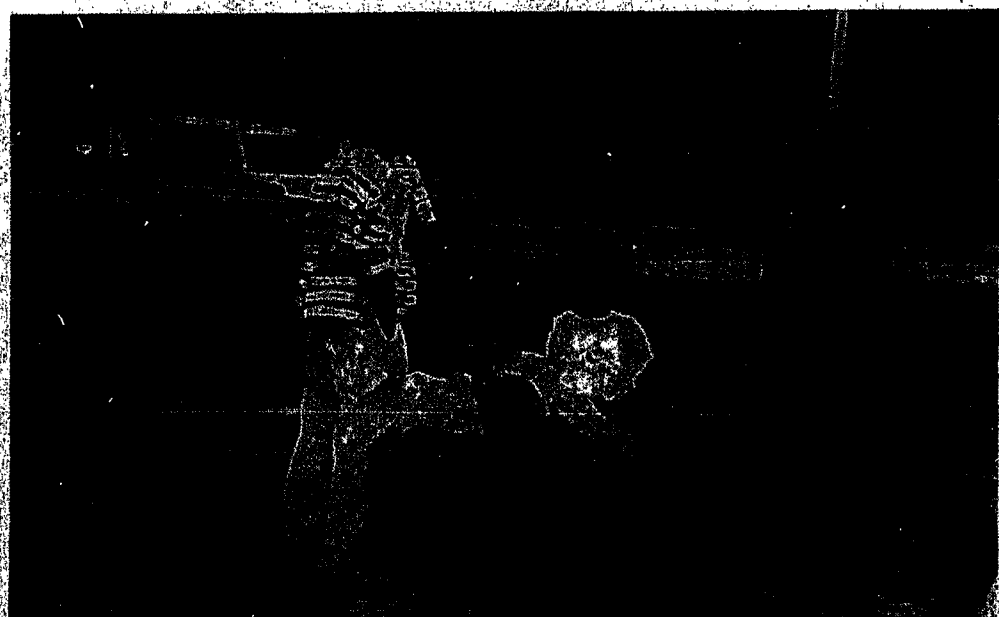

A special highlight of the activity was the showing of a video of the school's activities and events during the year.

Traci Bonney*

While most of the students brought towels or blankets to sit or lie on, some preferred the luxury of lawn chairs.

Bay girls get first-hand look at Mississippi Senate

BY DENA BISNETTE

Two Bay St. Louis girls got a firsthand chance to see how the Mississippi Legislature works through the courtesy of a family friend, State Senator Victor Franckiewicz Jr.

Katie Cuevas, an 18-year-old senior at Bay High, and Natalie Smith, age 12, spent a week in Jackson serving as pages to Franckiewicz during the 1990 legislative session.

Both girls said that being there while the legislators worked was much better than only hearing about it, and both met a number of other pages from around the state.

Cuevas, who said she even met a couple of people she knew from attending American Legion Girls' State, recently returned from Natchez, where she visited a fellow page from that city.

Cuevas had helped Franckiewicz in his campaign.

"I've known him all my life," she explained. "And, I thought it might be fun."

Mostly, the older State Senate pages deliver telephone messages, carry materials to the legislature's printers and take messages from one senator to another.

Smith, as a younger page, explained, "A page is a go-for. You carry messages and coffee and stuff."

"We actually got to go down on the legislative floor. It's pretty big in there but it's really crowded. It's like you have to fit 52 people and all their desks and chairs into that room."

"But sometimes, during breaks, I got to go around and get senators' autographs," she added.

"It was pretty fun, and we even got paid for it," Smith added.

Cuevas and Smith were shown how to be a page by senior pages, college students who take a semester off from school.

Smith definitely wants to go back. One of the things that appealed to her was getting out of school. Another was meeting all the other pages her age, most of whom were girls the week she spent in Jackson.

Cuevas has no political interests at this point, but she is used to working with the public through her job at The Princess Shoppe. She got a chance to do that at the state capital too.

"I worked in billing status for a while, handing out copies of different bills to the public before they'd been voted on. It is amazing how much is printed at that capital."

One day she stood in for one of the legislative secretaries.

"The public calls—a lot. Most of the people have questions about specific bills," Cuevas said.

She advises anyone else invited to be a page: "Wear comfortable shoes. You'll be climbing stairs and running back and forth all day."

On the first two days they were there, the legislators were in committee, but for the rest of the week, Cuevas and Smith had a chance to see some of the floor debates.

"It's real interesting to hear the different views. For example, there were a lot of legislators who wouldn't vote on the education bill because they disagreed with one little section," Cuevas said.

"It's not only educational in that it explains the way the government works, but you feel more of the effect of it when you're watching them in action and you're able to form your own opinion."

"The gambling issues were especially interesting. We were there when the Veterans of Foreign Wars came up with their little rally," she added. Other lobbying groups who presented their causes to legislators the week the girls were in Jackson included the Mississippi Pork Producers and the Mississippi Association of Junior Colleges.

"The first day there was a couple of protests," Smith added. "Mostly they were about bingo, but there were a couple about abortion and some about taxes. The people weren't fighting or anything, but there was a lot of screaming every time a senator went by," Smith said.

"What I thought was neat," said Smith, "was when a senator had somebody he wanted to make welcome, he'd raise his hand like he was in school and the lieutenant governor would call on him and then he'd say 'I want to welcome so-and-so.' They did that for a lot of people while we were there."
